CC/5/3	Records of Individual Schools (Closure periods: 100 years for school admission and attendance registers; 50 years for school log books; 30 years for school photographs) The 1872 Education (Scotland) Act set up in Caithness a system of local schools controlled by ten elected School Boards, one for each parish, and funded partly by local rates and partly by pupil fees. From 1873 onwards, head teachers of schools kept log books and admission registers. Please note that all the records pertaining to each school have been kept together within this series, rather than splitting them across multiple local authority schemas. Dates for this series, therefore, extend beyond the abolishment of County Councils in 1975 and throughout the tenure of Highland Regional Council (1975-1996) and The Highland Council (1996-). [See also: CC/5/4 – School Boards, 1873-1918 CC/5/5 – School Management Committees, 1919-1930 CC/5/6 – District School Management Committees, 1930-1957]	c.1864- c.2020

CC/5/3/47	Thurso Burgh: Miller Academy Primary School (previously the Miller Institution) The original Miller Institution was opened in 1862. It was named after its founder, Alexander Miller, a native of Thurso, who had inherited a considerable fortune from his uncle and used the money for various charitable purposes including the building of a school. The original building was extended in 1892 and in 1900 a second building, which is still part of the school (2024), was erected. In 1937 the present main block was opened as a secondary department and in 1958, due to the rapid increase in population because of Dounreay, the huts were built. In the same year Thurso High School was built and Miller Academy became solely a primary school.	1862-2007
